MODERN PERSPECTIVE. By WILLIAM R. WAKE. Boston: James R. Osgood &amp; Co., 1883.

This volume, the author tells us, is made up of papers originally contributed to The American Architect and Building News with half a dozen new chapters and a dozen pages of illustration. The particular points of his treatise, wherein it differs from others, are the greater prominence given the phenomena of parallel planes, the use made of the laws thus established to determine the perspective of lines of intersection and of shadows, with the perspective of divergent lines, and the views of the importance of the horizontal plane and of the method of points of distance and points of measure. For architects, to whom of course this book chiefly appeals, it should have a peculiar value from the author's long experience and thorough study of his subject, and he is to be congratulated upon presenting so much in so little space. Artists also have much to learn from the Professor's explanations, which are further elucidated by the portfolio of plans and heliotype prints accompanying his volume. Embroideries, with studies of the foujou, sculpture ranging from the colossal Buddha of Kamakura to the minute setki, ceramics, ivories, metal, and lacquer work of all kinds, gravures in black and colors will be treated of in their respective chapters, while the volume will contain over 700 illustrations. This necessarily form an important feature of a book of this class and it is pleasant to learn that the etchings and 150 engraved designs will be by M. Henri Guérard, while the reproductions in colors have been done by MM. Delmerier and Charles Gillot, the heliogravures by M. Dujardin, while much is promised for the other illustrations. Properly carried out, this book should form a unique and very valuable encyclopaedia of Japanese art, and we shall await its appearance with a lively interest.
